A CONVENTION HALL.

The meeting of the State Dental Association here today will suggest to many minds what should be called to all, the need of Roanoke for a first-class hall capable of seating from 1,200 to 1,500 people on the floor and four hundred more in the gallery. It would pay the city itself to erect one if private capital would not invest in it.

But under proper stimulus private capital in the hands of public spirited citizens could be enlisted. Such a hall should be built as would meet the needs of a city of 17,000, but of the 50,000 inhabitants, who we are confident will in a few years occupy the swelling limits of this corporation.

Roanoke has no first-class hall and it ought to have. And it is Roanoke's destiny to have what she ought to have. Therefore have we faith that the hall will be forthcoming.

THE CENSUS AND 1892.

The most carefully prepared tables dealing with the subject of the apportionment for the next ten years of Congress, and its effect on the electoral college, unite in forecasting one result. New York will no longer be the pivotal state. If the House of Representatives be kept at its present figure of 330 members the electoral college will have 422 votes and the electoral basis of representation will be placed at about 198,000.

The plan which at present is best received, however, is one using 200,000 as the electoral basis. Counting in the electoral votes of Wyoming and Idaho, the electoral college will, under that plan be 406. Throwing the new States to the Republican column, though there are grave doubts as to their Republicanism, the total electoral votes of the States which voted for Harrison will be 245, while the Democratic States foot up but 161.

New York will have but thirty-two votes. It is clear then that she ceases to be pivotal, and that the addition of Indiana will be necessary to assure Democratic success. Even then no margin is allowed for accidents. The situation might not be considered hopeful to the Democrats were not other facts and figures brought into play.

First to be considered is that of the forty-four states in the Union, twenty-six have Democratic governors and only eighteen are governed by Republicans, one of whom at least was elected by the legislature as a minority candidate. But of equal importance to be looked at will be the result in November. The present outlook is acknowledged by frank Republicans in Washington to be extremely favorable to the Democrats so far as the fall elections are concerned. If those elections are sweepingly Democratic or confirm the Democrats in their possession of such states as Ohio and Iowa, the fight of 1892 will be put on a different basis.

SUFFERING WALL STREET.

A personal letter from one of the leading operators in Wall street says that money has not been so tight in ten years as it is now. If the Treasury does not come to the relief of the situation Wall street may have a small-sized panic within the next three weeks.

But the rest of the country cannot be materially affected. Money is plenty to move the crops, and one has only to come into this section of the country to learn that money is plenty here. Operations involving millions are easily assumed and managed. That shows where public confidence rests.

The approaching month is from a health standpoint one of the most trying of the year. The decay of vegetation fills the atmosphere with malaria. The fathers of the city should be more alert than ever, and all good citizens should join a committee of the whole for the preservation of the city's health. Remember that the streets of Jerusalem were a ways clean because each householder swept his own pavement. The same thing doubtless held true of Jerusalem backyards and alleys.

SPECIAL prayers are to be offered in South Carolina that God-fearing officers may be chosen. That is all very well, but getting a majority of votes cast for desirable candidates, and getting them counted, is a more certain course. If praying without laboring would set the world right, the millennium would have arrived long ago.

THE building of a steel ship at Newport News, merely shows what can be done in Virginia. There is no reason why America should not carry her own commerce in her own vessels. Virginia hills furnish the ores and minerals which make the iron, and in time she will build ships as well, and as cheaply as any State in the Union.

Pig Iron vs. the Force Bill.
From the New York Times.
Of the seven great pig iron producing States three—Alabama, Tennessee and Virginia—have voted for the force bill. Let us have peace and plenty of pig iron, more furnaces and fewer frauds in the name of honesty.
